TEMPO.CO, Jakarta - Jakarta Governor Anies Baswedan has decided not to hold an inauguration ceremony for his office, worrying about the fresh COVID-19 outbreak in Jakarta and also the safety of his family. "When I receive my new office I want to avoid everyone, especially the office staff, because I don't want the virus to enter and infect my family or the people around me. Therefore, I have a decision to make," he said at a press conference on Wednesday (11/5). The governor, who assumed office in the early hours on Monday (10/5), said he would postpone his inauguration for his new office until 2021. He will hold a ceremony for the vice governor position. Anies also said he was concerned about the prevailing COVID-19 outbreak in Jakarta. "I want to speak with the person at the Ministry of Health and try to get as much information about how many COVID-19 cases there are in Jakarta right now," he said. According to data from Health Ministry, there are currently 8,714 confirmed cases in Jakarta and 1,935 cured patients. The governor also said he would get the data on the number of COVID-19 patients that are entering Jakarta from points of entry. "If there are cases coming in, I want to ban them," he said. As an issue related to Jakarta, the governor also said there were several illegal mud-pit activities which have put the health of residents at a high risk. "There are illegal mud-pit activities taking place in various parts of the city. There is a risk if the mud pits spread to large areas," said Anies.

Monday, March 28, 2009 Update 1: Dynamic Scaling It turns out that there's a very simple solution for this: You can scale your images by dividing your image size by the largest image size you're printing. The result is an image that's about a quarter of the size of your largest image. This will work quite well when you want to print a landscape image with a head-and-shoulders portrait (as in the figure). Here's how it works: Just do this before you print: 1) Measure your largest image size. 2) Set up your file so that the print size is x times larger than that. For example, if your largest image is 8x10, and you want to print 5x7, you'd set your print size to 32x40. 3) Scale all your images to match the new size, by doing this: `Image Resize --v 5x7 32x40 -deltx 29` You'll need to have Image Resize installed. You can get the latest version from: Well, here's one exception. When you work with a dynamic print size, such as one that grows and shrinks as the print size changes, then you have to split each image into tiles. And when you use an image that's larger than the print size, you just stack them in the order in which you want them to show up in the print. With that in mind, here's the solution: Scale the entire document down to the print size that you want. Scale each image down to the print size that you want. You can do this using Image Manipulate by changing the scaling mode to "Tile": Set the package option "Scale" to "Tile" Save the package Change the scaling mode to "Fit" Save the package Go back and change your scaling mode back to "Fit". Done. Finally, here's a little help for previewing the result of these steps. Make sure to set your image size to 100%. UPDATE 2: I just found out that this solution will not work well for black-and-white images. That is, the image will be shrunk. The figure below, which shows a red square at 0 pixels on
